

Staff Hiring Policy

Institute of Minecraft Studies Publishing Department

1. § In accordance with Article V of the Constitution, anyone may apply to participate in the Department. Such requests are handled by the editor-in-chief.
2. § If the editor-in-chief has concern regarding an applicant (such as moderation/disciplinary action, lack of experience), the editor-in-chief and subdepartment coordinators decide. If they unanimously agree so, the applicant is rejected with justification. The applicant may appeal this to the Department through the editor-in-chief.
3. § If the applicant is not rejected, an experienced editor volunteers or is assigned by the editor-in-chief to mentor them. Any work done by the trainee is supervised by the mentor and may be overruled by them. Both the trainee and the mentor are responsible for the trainee's work. The mentor helps their trainee with their work, provides valuable feedback, and introduces them to the Department's practices. The mentor informs the editor-in-chief if they are not confident in the trainee's abilities.
4. § At the end of the mentoring period, the mentor informs the editor-in-chief about their experience and recommendation.
 - (1) If the editor-in-chief and the mentor are satisfied, the trainee is accepted into the Department.
 - (2) If the editor-in-chief and the mentor find substantial concern over behavior, contrary to the Institution's values, the trainee is rejected with detailed justification. Trainees may be rejected before the end of the mentoring period. The trainee may appeal the rejection to the Department through the editor-in-chief.
 - (3) If the editor-in-chief and the mentor cannot come to agreement, the Department decides on the trainee's acceptance.
