Completed work

- Published “The Arena vs. The Idea” by Turtle2770
IMSC: S-TE-1
- Reviewer, mentor, columnist and reporter, editor, and author guides created and published
You may find these in the IMSPD Discord server, #guides
- Created a list of potential reviewers
These people have consented to being on the list and are willing and happy to review any articles

Planned work

- Second issue of the IMS Journal is currently being worked on
This is chiefly being managed by the Journal Co-ordinator (koviubi)
- The journalism sub-department, led by the Journalism Co-ordinator (matcha_tea) will begin active recruitment of journalists and columnists and increase in articles published
- The Publishing Department will also focus on the upcoming CIV event to publish works after-the-fact
- EiC to contact active members in RaidFarms, Anarchyphase, Minecraft Bloodlines, and CivLabs for networking, recruitment to the department, and inquiry into their interest in publishing with the IMS.

Freedom of Information (FoI) Requests

The department received zero FoI requests in August, and so has fulfilled zero requests.

Afterword

I can say that this month has not been the most productive in terms of published articles for the PubDep, and this is mainly due to the fact that resources have been entirely focused on working on the second issue of the IMSJ. Again, the same issue which I have repeated ad nauseam persists – the department is lacking manpower.

Four communities are now in my sights – RaidFarms, Anarchyphase, Minecraft Bloodlines, and CivLabs. I believe that all these communities share values with the IMS in terms of experimentation and belief in the value of Minecraft (Server) Theory. I will endeavour to the best of my abilities to get in contact with those in these communities.

I would also like to thank the Journal Co-ordinator, koviubi, for his work in the department, as well as for reminding me and helping me catch up on some work where I have been busy in real life.

I apologise for my inactivity, which caused a slight decrease in productivity during this month.
