IMS Week of Journalism: Reporting What Matters

Sub-Department strategy brief #1 for the purposes of promotion and recruitment

29/09/2026

Purpose

This document will lay out the exact plan for the Sub-Department to promote itself and recruit more staff by doing what I call the “IMS Week of Journalism”.

Resources needed to do this will also be laid out in this document.

What is the IMS Week of Journalism?

The IMS Week of Journalism (WoJ) will be one week, from Monday to Sunday, where a news story, opinion article, interview, or other works relevant to the Sub-Department are published in a row.

This week is intended to drive discussion and debate between members, allow for more work created by the IMS to be shared, and grow the library of the IMS.

Each article shall be posted in #article-announcements and will include three thought-provoking questions underneath. These will adequately link with the article posted but also contain controversial or topical discussion starters.

PubDep staff active in the main server should also make it clear that the articles are works of the Press Sub-Department, and encourage members to sign up to work for it if they find the content posted interesting.

Article topics

An announcement shall be made two weeks before the planned start of WoJ to allow adequate time for planning, researching, writing, and creating announcement posts.

This announcement will contain a thread and Google Form, allowing members to suggest what they want to see reported, and a supplementary poll of ten topics pre-selected by the PCo.

Each article shall alternate between factual reporting and opinion to ensure community engagement and variety of discussion.

Resources

Planning this event and creating announcement posts shall be done by the PCo with support of the JCo and the EiC.

Articles shall be written by reporters and columnists of the Press Sub-Dep; where they are not available, the PCo shall perform this work.

A maximum of one hour is expected to be required to complete each article, thus seven hours of work is expected of the Sub-Department.
